Ready For the Test

"Dynamometer" is the name of this new piece of equipment owned by Charlotte county and brought to Appomattox as a part of the Farm-Ag Workshop for agricultural education instructors meeting here July 22-23. With Appomattox instructor Tom Johnson in the driver's seat, conference leader G.H. Hetzel (near center) watches over oil - fillup just prior to testing the tractor for amount of working horsepower. Hetzel explained that after a tune-up a tractor should respond better, a measurement easily obtained from the Dynamometer. Three leaders and 25 teachers from Amherst, Appomattox, Buckingham, Campbell, Charlotte, Cumberland and Prince Edward counties took part in the two-day conference including (from left): O. L. Waddell, Rustburg; Johnson, B. B, Cauley, Brookville; Hetzel, and on the truck, R. B. Bishop of Buckingham and Dennis Torrence, Appomattox. In the background: J. A. Baker, Prince Edward; E. L. Moseley, Charlotte; L. A. Starling, Charlotte; and W. C. Dudley, Appomattox.

School Bill

WASHINGTON — Reps. Watkins M. Abbitt (D-Va.) and W. C. (Dan) Daniel (D-Va.) issued a joint statement Tuesday saying passage of the education appropriations bill for 1971 clearly shows Congress is opposed to spending money to achieve racial balance in public schools.

The bill, approved by the Senate Tuesday and by the House July 16, specifies that no part of the funds appropriated under the bill may be used to force the busing of students to achieve racial balance in the schools.

Abbitt is the congressman from the Fourth District while Daniel is from the Fifth District. "It is our hope that the President will sign this legislation and that this action will be followed by positive determination within the administration to see that it is enforced," said the congressmen.

"The intent of Congress is clear. Congress opposed spending federal money to achieve race balance and when this legislation is signed into law, it will be in violation of an act of Congress for the office of Education and the Justice Department to require busing in order to overcome racial imbalance," continued the joint statement.

The language of the conference report, adopted by the Senate Tuesday and approved by the House on July 16, is stronger than any previously approved, according to Abbitt and Daniel.

"Last year we in Congress considered that the language against busing included in the appropriation bill was sufficient but this has not deterred the courts or the HEW from imposing their will on large segments of the American public in violation of the expressed will of Congress," the statement said.

"Now Congress has sought to make the words stronger and the meaning even more abundantly clear."

Abbitt and Daniel said that this is one of the most crucial issues before the American people today.

Abbitt and Daniel said that the 1964 Civil Rights Act specifically provides that desegregation does not mean the busing of students to achieve racial balance in the schools.

"The idea of busing is purely a figmentation of the Federal Judiciary, aided and abetted by bureaucrats who sit in Washington and try to dictate the operations of school districts across the land."

As co-sponsors of two "freedom of choice" bills now pending in the Health, Education and Labor Committee and the House Judiciary Committee, Abbitt and Daniel vowed to continue to work for the ultimate passage of this legislation.

Social Security

Send your questions to: Questions and Answers, Social Security Office, P. O. Box 2496, Lynchburg, Va. 24501.

Q – I am receiving social security retirement benefit while working part-time. My employer deducts social security tax from my pay. I'm over 65 - do I still have to pay the tax?

A – Yes, your employer is correct in withholding the tax from your earnings. He also shares this responsibility by paying an amount equal to your social security taxes, regardless of your age or benefit status.

Q – My only child is now 18 and receiving benefits as a student. When he became 18 the social security wife's benefit I was receiving stopped. Why can't I receive benefits now?

A – Wife's benefits are payable before age 65 only if you are caring for a disabled child or one under 18. There is no provision for paying a wife's benefits solely on the basis of her caring for a child who is receiving benefits as a student.

Q – I understand that Medicare will help pay for the purchase of durable medical equipment as well as for its rental. Who decides if the equipment should be rented or purchased and how does Medicare make payment?

A – The decision whether to buy or rent medical equipment is entirely up to you. You may wish to talk to your doctor before deciding. Factors to consider in deciding whether to buy or rent equipment include its cost and the length of time you will need it. If you will need a piece of equipment for a long period of time and it is inexpensive, it may be more economical to purchase. However, if you need an item for a short time it may be better to rent it. Medical insurance will help pay for the equipment only when it is medically necessary and the reasonable charge is paid, whichever is less.

Question: What can be done in the future by growers to avoid or minimize severe market fluctuations?

Answer: With reference to the reasons cited above which contributed to the sharp drop in prices during the latter part of the 1969 season, it is apparent that only in the crop report did action by growers have an effect on market price changes. Since crop reports are from growers used by the Crop Reporting Service to develop the crop estimate, it is very important that those growers who make crop reports use their very best judgment in developing this information. The fact that the 1969 crop turned out to be about five per cent heavier than growers thought it would be on December 1 might have been unavoidable, but it has been used as a reason for the price decline.

Market records in Virginia dark-fired tobacco clearly point to the fact that the better grades of tobacco show considerably more price stability year after year and such was the case in 1969. Therefore, it seems to me that one of the best ways for growers to avoid or minimize the effect of market fluctuations on them is to concentrate as high a portion of their production as possible in the better grades of tobacco.

With an auction system of selling there is no way to eliminate price fluctuations. Competition for the tobacco can vary day by day, hour by hour, and in some instances, minute by minute. This is the nature of an auction system and by using it the buyer and seller are able to bring the maximum competition available at that moment to bear on the sales price.

* * *

Question: What changes in the marketing structure for dark tobacco do you think might be helpful?

Answer: The basic structure of the tobacco markets in Virginia, by using the auction system, in my opinion, provides the best means yet devised where the grower can feel that the full demand for his product is available at the moment of sale. Other systems could be made available whereby a more uniform price structure could be

*Dollar figures based on overall market average price in 1969 of $53.08 per CWT., and in 1967 of $40.80 per CWT.

The following article was written by James A. Nolen, extension agent, farm management, assigned to the district office in Appomattox. His detailed studies of the economic aspect of the dark fired tobacco industry gives him an excellent insight into the situation confronting tobacco growers at this time.

"Mister Darklea" was looking mighty glum a couple of years back, Now that he's been getting some long - deserved attention, the situation has brightened right much. "Mister Darklea" refers of course to Virginia Dark Fired Tobacco.

The "attention" took several forms. The most important form was higher prices paid to growers these past two years. The average market price has risen about $12 per CWT since 1967. Prior to 1967 the average market price had stayed around $39 per CWT since 1957 and before.

Picture yourself, Mr. farmboy, receiving the same per unit price for your labor, or other output, for 10 years! Man, it gets sorta discouraging!

It not only gets discouraging, it gets downright unprofitable! After all, remember the expenses go up for every new crop. What's a grower to do? Well, we all obtained, but I believe these would generally operate at a lower price level. Any person, group or organization willing to take the risk of guaranteeing a uniform price would have to do so at a level low enough to cover possible losses. In a free enterprise system economic risk is distributed to the producer and chance of economic gain. This does not rule out the possibility of packing the tobacco on a grade basis and paying the grower the average price received for the grade after all of the tobacco from the crop has been sold. This procedure has not been discussed with any grower since I have found most growers unwilling to accept just the average price for the grade and willing to take the chance that the buyer will think his tobacco is better than other baskets of the same grade and pay more for it.

Within this basic structure, however, it would certainly be helpful for more buyers to be on the markets at all times and a number of marketing practices might also be improved.

Question: What is the general trend with regard to fire-cured tobacco supply and demand?

Answer: The world trend in the production of fire-cured tobacco is down. Production in 1969 is estimated by our U.S. Department of Agriculture to be 108 million pounds – 16 per cent less than average annual production during 1960-64. This decline in production is shared by the three types of fire-cured tobacco grown in the United States. Production of Virginia dark-fired tobacco in 1969 at 6.7 million pounds was 23 per cent less than average production during 1960-64. Likewise, the production of Kentucky-Tennessee types of fire-cured tobacco in 1969 at 34 million pounds was 23 per cent less than the 44 million pounds annual average produced during 1960-64. The best measurement of demand is in the price buyers are willing to pay for the available supplies. In those areas where prices are reported, 1969 saw record price levels except in Kentucky and Tennessee where prices ranged five to six per cent below the record level in 1968.

Women And Security

"If you're a woman, your chances of collecting social security benefits are better than those of your husband or your brother," according to Mr. William J. Vinson, District Manager of the Lynchburg Social Security area.

* * *

"Fifty - one percent of our beneficiaries are adult women," said Mr. Vinson. "While only 34 percent are adult men, and in addition, he noted, it is women who manage most of the benefits paid to the 15 percent of social security beneficiaries who are children."

"A woman who works builds valuable retirement and disability protection for herself and her dependents," Mr. Vinson pointed out. And payments are payable to her children in the event of her death just as in the case of men. A woman who has not worked outside her home may qualify for social security benefits on her husband's record. "You might say," Mr. Vinson said, "that the social security law recognizes that being a housewife and mother is a special career."

Some of the ways you can qualify for social security payments as a woman are: (1) As a wife, when your husband is getting social security benefits and you are 62 or older, or have children under 18, or disabled children in your care; (2) As a widow at 60 or older or as early as age 50 if severely disabled; (3) As a young widow if you have children, under 18 or disabled children in your care; and (4) in certain cases, even a divorced wife may qualify for payments.
